The Unknown

The false illusion of life - the deception of humanity

I write this book for those of my Companions who are advanced on this Path and whose minds are capable of understanding the following lines - this book is for SS only. I do not wish to give a long sermon on this book, for those whose minds are receptive to the Truth and the parasitism inherent in the current chaotic paradigm that the enemy is feeding will understand. Consider this book an analytical work of the current surreal phenomenon that you can keep for yourself. Those who deserve to reach paradise and redeem their own souls are an exception for me. This book will systematically take you to the aspects of understanding in which you will find the essence of the whole book. May The Strength Be With You.

Knowledge has Power. In all Power there is Knowledge, and in all Knowledge there is Power.

Fictional Illusion-reality?

If we follow the theory that man is only imagining all around him and nothing exists in "reality", that all physical/natural things are a figment of his own mind, then what is life worth? It is not merely an idea that comes out of nowhere and a random description of a phenomenon, but an unfathomable question that we either don't deal with because we don't want to, or because we are incapable of understanding it.

In a certain paradigm, life is an illusion, a surreal and elaborate "reality" produced by the enemy, which the average person considers to be True. But to begin this journey, we must be part of the concept we call Knowledge. To know that it is you who have the power that very few in this multicultural society have.

For thousands of years man has taken life for granted, the people around him and almost everything that goes with life.

But with Knowledge in the back ground, can it change this paradigm? Going back to the "theory", which is a surreal delusion, the average person would say, but rationally thought through would be orbital nonsense? Let me ask a very simple question - what is 1 mile away from you?

What happens there? You don't know because you are not there. So does anything actually exist there? Then the landscape and the picture that you knew when you actually went there and looked at what was there is re-established. But if you're not there and you don't look around, you don't analyze the phenomena that are there, are you sure it's there?

The mere realization of this fact may present you with some hard facts, but do yourself a favor and don't worry unnecessarily. If you are overcome by unbridled anxiety and paranoia while reading this book, or if you feel that it adds nothing to your moral or spiritual level, then stop reading it, because I don't want you to suffer from paranoia because of this work.

These are all questions and assumptions that one cannot do anything with, they are just there in one's mind, lurking in the unbridled mind, this unanswered question that may never find an answer.

Simulation - Under The Control Of A Surreal Entity

The mind is easily fooled - after all, one draws conclusions after a first impression, and that particular "first impression" can affect one's whole life. Take life as an example - based on the first impression it is real, isn't it? What would happen if the mind discovered the chaotic but in its own way fantastic phenomenon we call "reality"?

For man, reality, life, the world, is what he imagines. Each person's analysis and conception of the world is different. Would each man float in a cloud of illusion, controlled by a higher entity that is in fact above man? Let me ask you another question - a man comes along the street in front of you, a man unknown to you.

What makes you think he is who you think he is? You can only see him from the front, but what about the back? Is it drawn, is there choreography behind it? Or is it completely useless until you analyse his back? Another example - you read a book, a 140 page book, you turn to page 67 - is the writing printed on the other pages? Or maybe the other pages would be blank? You don't know until you turn the page and see for yourself.

What if, after analysing reality, you realise you are living a lie, that nothing around you is what you think it is? Then what was the point of existing until now? Why would any ordinary citizen do what they have been doing?

What would be the point of starting your monotonous day if you were merely staying at the bottom of the trend of progress?

What would be the point of living if your entire existence, vision and perspective were a lie until then? These are all questions that one does not address, or rather does not want to address, because one's perception of the actuality of life vibrates on false foundations, and one has done nothing all one's life, one has lived one's life in a false, fictitious reality, and every single goal one has striven for has been futile.

Delusions, Illusions and Ignorance

We often talk about how much we know about life, how sure we are of what we are and what surrounds us, but these are all irrational assumptions in a naturalistic life in which man is a "puppet" controlled by the "entity" above him.

Because man wants to believe in something, he wants to believe that something is above him, that he can respect something or someone, and this is in a sense, in the broader but more complex sense of the word, a slave, a subordinate and subjugated mentality. Without free will, man, every single act and deed he does, is false, because he does not want to do what he really wants to do, but is forced to do it by something or someone. Man in the role of the puppet and the "Unknown" in the role of the controller.

Man is instinctive, driven by instincts, and these instincts are real in their own, physical sense, but would they be false in a metaphysical sense higher than the physical sense?

If one thinks about the things I have listed, one realises that life is not what we were taught in school, because the people who preach them can be abstracted to the following paradigm - they are just conceited individuals using the theory of 'false reality', imagined by 'us' or merely living with us in a cloud of illusory reality, not acting or doing anything of their own free will, but being guided by a 'higher' being 'unknown' to them, or an 'entity' realised from a moral concept. Is it worthwhile for man to exist in such a false life, which is always only a "theory"? Ignoring this paradigm, I would like to take the Christian churches as an example. Should we believe in "God"?

Who or what is the concept of "God"? Would it be just a fictitious phenomenon that acts as a subconscious weapon, present in our current multicultural society, targeting only the mind and, so to speak, guiding its every move? Is the whole of Christianity nothing more than a mere existential deception, which, beyond the scourge of humanity, besides the rational question that life is possible, is not what we would think it is.

Surely you have noticed, dear reader, that when you happen to have important business and you are in a hurry and you are late with an example, everything conspires against you.

You can't find your shoes/boots, you can't find your car keys, there's a huge traffic jam when you're about to leave, ignoring the fact that not a soul has passed you by until you're in a hurry, and the list could go on and on, but one common one - something won't, it doesn't want you to get there, or rather it doesn't want you to have free will, because what you realize is that you do everything normally, including putting on your shoes, finding the key, but it would be your will, and this "Unknown" being doesn't want it, to decide your fate, so it arranges events so that you enter a little bubble of illusory reality in which you unconsciously obey the existential signals that "It" sends you, even from a lack of free will, and you are part of the bubble of illusory reality of illusory reality that "He" has created, in which you lack free will and you are involuntarily obeying the signals that He sends you and accepting the paradigms that He has created for you.

Going back to Christianity for a few words - if it is an illusory reality that we live in, then it is completely unnecessary to believe in it, because free will is not inherently there, it is not a given, and why would you want to push aside your tiny little moral view that you are not commanded?

In a given illusion, can one be subject to an illusion?

The Deception Of Humanity And The Slave Mentality

In reality, putting aside the aforementioned false reality, it is still irrelevant to believe in it because it teaches us nothing, it does not teach us how to live life. In the "bible" there are countless executions, human sacrifice, blood sacrifice, animal murder, infanticide, deception against the actual, True God, and more examples for another day. It is written in full in the Torah that "God's" chosen people, i.e. Judaism, will have a handful of slaves, the "goyim", (The word goy means gentile) and they want to enslave every single "goyim" so that they can rule. Judaism is the deception of humanity along with Christianity and the "Nazarenes".

About the "Nazarene" in short - a child killing, deceptive, imperialistic, corrupt, alien alien endowed with constructive qualities but in reality a grey reptilian, which believe me you don't want to see and I won't talk about them any more in the book because I want to keep the moral purity of the book and not taint it with the above candidates.

Having left the irrelevant, useless stuff, let's get back to the original subject of the book. The paradigm just mentioned can be interpreted in other ways, for example, when you are crossing the road and in a hurry to get somewhere, the light turns red, a crowd of cars comes along just when you are supposed to be busy, and the list goes on. All these things that happen in almost constant succession, can we still attribute them to chance?

Absolutely not, since it is more than mere coincidence, more than mere phenomenon, since that would be physically impossible, and beyond the concept of 'chance'.

In this postmodern reality, we can often wonder or ponder the moral question of whether man as a being and as a single form of existence exists in this monumental Universe. The very fact and saying that "space is infinite" forces us to ponder the assumption that this is unlikely.

That is, starting from the paradigm where man as a terrestrial being and the Earth itself is a tiny speck of dust in the whole Universe, it is almost impossible that only we humans inhabit the whole Universe. I also doubt that there is only one solar system.

Our solar system is just a speck of dust in the infinite atmosphere we call space. On the other side of this space, or just another half of it, where human eyes and technology have not yet been, we can assume that there may be more, countless lives in this galaxy.

It is possible that these 'species' have overcome all that modern human technology cannot, such as death. Because what is death? What do we mean by that word? The death of the biological body itself, from which we can infer that the living organism dies and then decomposes and becomes a mere pile of bones, or the death of the Mental Body, the Soul itself? Many a man, when he hears the word or Spiritual statement, Soul, thinks little of it.

Here we are in a physical body in which man does not know what is hidden. Everything we do, have done, and will do, everything we think about, everything we want to do - all of it is due to the Spirit, yet we pay little attention to it. We live here on Earth, but why? Of all the planets and celestial bodies, why Earth? I believe that the scientific hypothesis that life exists only on Earth is impossible, it has been proven in vain.

Not only does mankind not know about its own solar system, the planets and the life on them, but it does not even know what Life, Death and Soul really are.

Few people talk about the philosophy of the Trinity, but those who do are either completely wrong or seek answers from a completely different perspective than the norm. Without Knowledge there is no answer, just as without an answer there is no Knowledge.

The Earth was created for us, but then were we created for the Earth? We live here on this planet, we live our lives here, and yet we cannot answer what Life is. Man just exists, roaming this Earth, going about his daily needs, going about his monotonous way of life, and no human being is an exception.

Because there is no Knowledge in the human mind that can lead us to an impression, a hypothesis that can bring us closer to the concept we call "Life".

The Disguise Of The Will To Believe and Chaotic Reality

We have the virtue that distinguishes us from the dead. The dead don't get up in the morning, don't go to work, don't take part in the degradation of human society, don't eat and drink, don't speak and remain silent. But their essence is greater.

They show the living the reality that life is not what they think it is. For death is the opposite of life, but its symbolism implies an understanding and acceptance of Consciousness and Being that we are alive, for it shows and confronts the individual with the fact that life does not last forever for the average person.

The physical body is dead, but the soul lives on, in another dimension. Time is up, death has knocked, and man must let it in because he has no choice. When death enters, a new life begins from the old ashes, and a new era. Do we want to believe in the afterlife? Should we take moral comfort in this phenomenon? Or a belief in the hope of the mind?

Is the whole world around us real? Do we have proof that what surrounds us really exists? Does it exist only in our own minds, or does it exist realistically in postmodern reality? We cannot answer this question, we cannot do anything about it. You are sitting in your room, what is 100 miles away?

You don't look, you don't know. But if you don't look, is there anything there at all, or is the landscape only visible if you really look? As long as you don't look, it would be completely useless. Because reality wants to be deceptive and doesn't care what would be good for you.

As long as you don't look around you, as long as you don't notice the reality around you, it's completely useless to have anything there. I would bring up the example of interaction again, or even just approaching or getting to know someone.

If you are face to face with a person, you only see their front, it is completely useless to draw their back, because you don't look until you get there. As much as we want to believe in something, enough to believe that there is a reality around us, it is still nothing more than a pipe dream. In the absence of real evidence, you can't believe in something that even We aren't sure of.

Of course, this assumption can be fooled by telling someone to look around for us, as long as we are not looking to reassure.

This is still false, since you didn't look, and the person may have imagined it, since it is another unexplained theory that man imagines everything and exists in a false reality created by his own mind. It is a fair question then, how were we born? The short answer is - man is not aware of his own mind, body and existence, he is only aware of a fraction of it.

For if we were fully aware of ourselves, our minds and souls, we would have answers to the questions of Life, Death, the Beyond, the Dream and so on. We could fly, we could travel in time, but we are unable to do these things because we use only 5-10% of our brain. Moving on from this paradigm, we can then wonder, is there a meaning to death? If the whole world that surrounds us is just a false illusion and delusion, would death as an existential phenomenon give meaning to life?

Indeed, if we address this essential question, we must conclude that, in fact, all of life is false. What would be the meaning of death if we were not alive? Or do we exist, but man is unable to answer this moral question for himself?

Every man who "lives" his life is merely wandering alone in the illusory reality of his own mind.

The "Backrooms"

I'd like to start this chapter with a monologue about how this part is a bit different from what I really wanted. It's a phenomenon about which I have absolutely no information, and it has its place in this book as a kind of cuckoo bird, but I'll mention it in a few sentences anyway.

From an outsider's point of view, you talk to yourself, you go to work alone, you are alone at work, at home, on the street, in the shop. The mind is capable of fantastic things, and you don't know your own mind, so you don't know what it's capable of.

I could compare him to the protagonist in a film. This film starts with comedy and covers all categories, and at its core is the tendency of human life to change with chaotic regularity throughout the course of a lifetime.

If man is the protagonist in his own illusion, who is the director of the film? Who writes and shapes the dialogue?

It is a concept almost unknown to everyone, which is not even addressed, merely accepted as existing, and one does not want to deal with the underlying Philosophy, because one would go mad if one knew the Truth behind the "Unknown".

The Truth that I myself am confronted with in a way that is beyond the comprehension of the human mind. But then the question rightly arises in the human mind, what happens after death?

Then perhaps what we "longed for" before death can begin - life? Why would it make sense to be confronted with such a surreally hectic and monotonous phenomenon that is so inexplicable.

Because no one person could give the right answer, since everyone lives their daily life through their own paradigm, with its fixed mentality and morality.

Throughout human history there have been countless chaotic incidents, for example - a person suddenly 'disappeared', i.e. vanished from one moment to the next, but it happened in a place where there were people and could not be explained.

Another example is when a whole huge plane with several people on board 'suddenly' disappeared in mid-air and has not been explained since. This is when the phenomenon known in the trade as the 'backroom' comes to the fore. Below is a small illustration of this "room".

The atmosphere of this place can give a strange feeling, as it is created with chaotic regularity. Its content, however, does not show much affinity with the original theme of the book, but I thought it might be somewhat relevant to mention.

It is a specific atmosphere and identity in the "reality" as we know it, and it is infinite in length. However, this should reassure all readers, but does not exclude the monumental quarters mentioned above.

Nor, of course, the 'theory' of whether or not we live in an illusion. These are all questions that the average person cannot answer because he has lost the very essence that would allow him to answer the question - and that is Knowledge.

Ask yourself - What would you do if you were in this place?

Death Without Life? Life Without Death?

There was once real morality. There was once justice. Just as every morality has a Justice in its own way, so every Justice has a morality in a particular perspective.

Over the years, man has developed an image of life and death, but the underlying and surreal meaning of these is all the more difficult to understand. Man likes to believe that he is somehow more special than other people. We are given a multicultural, postmodern society in which one has to exist in exchange for 'life'. Do we live for life, or is life for us? Are we afraid of death, but death loves us?

As I said above, what is the point of the false essence of death if life is an illusion? Would any morality we formulate in ourselves through the false meaning of life be futile?

Do we exist in a false life, seeking the essence that gives us a false sense of reality? The self-image and morality of the characteristics of life in man, in their destructive formulation in man, are false because they cannot be realized, because man would be incapable of creating and cultivating the value we call life.

We were born on this planet, but to ask the question is futile in the paradigm that man exists, but then does life exist? The combination of the two went hand in hand, or we are just not able to recognize the fact that we are finding the answer to the meaning of Life.

For Death needs Life before it, from which it can snatch the soul and take it with it. In your false life, is Death the real one? The only thing that is truly real and True around you is the death of your own mentality, morality, body and spirit? In short, everything that you are dies and is destroyed? People whisper about death, or rather what-for, they don't want to face this fact because they are afraid to look at it, or give insight to analyze the false reality of their own morality, because they are afraid of the unknown.

Everyone is afraid of what they don't know.

It is a destructive mentality in its surrealism, because until something happens, it is completely unnecessary to worry about it. Worrying leads to a slave mentality.

He who has the material to make a formula, pour it into himself, and thus change his soul, is exempt in the eyes of death. Death comes for all those who are lazy. Those who make the necessary effort can become formidable in the eyes of death, and at the same time earn its praise.

The Morality Of Death

Death as a phenomenon to come, the essence of which is greater than man can imagine. Death as a surreal, metaphysical entity that loves everyone and takes everyone with it.

Death as a shadow that disappears when light is cast upon it. Death as a silent warrior who takes revenge on man, vetoes him and then simulates terror in him.

Death travels a long way before it actually reaches the human mind and the individual. Never stopping, it approaches in systematic steps, and finally reaches its goal, but man no longer knows this, for death strikes its victim with cruel suddenness. People exist, grow up, live and die around us. This paradigm is the fate of all human beings, which seals the faith that seeks to carry within itself whether we can live eternal life.

Can we conquer death if we cannot even conquer ourselves? Can we know life if we cannot even give life meaning? By growing beyond all these questions, we are getting closer to an understanding that offers a glimpse of Death.

Because what is Death?

Who dies and why? Is man "born" to die? Many people are terrified of this phenomenon, but my dear readers who tirelessly read my writings, you are very important to me, but then would I really be alone in this paradigm? Am I alone in knowing that I am writing a book? Am I imagining that I am writing this book, or am I really writing it? Would my moral outlook and philosophy of life be merely made up of false virtues and illusions in a deceptive Illusion?

Death as salvation and as consolation. Know your "world" and the world know you if it is indeed an illusion, and everything is imagined by everyone, but one thing cannot be imagined - and that is the legacy of Knowledge for us. For we have a power over the perspective of humanity that few have. The common man fears death, but you know, Brothers and Sisters, that after death life begins. Our life is and has been given to us to evolve and to perfect ourselves Spiritually, so that we can then step out of this illusion and overcome its chaos.

We are able to conquer death because the virtue and power we possess gives us the actual essence to turn the dead into the living, the living into the dead, the ugly into the beautiful.

We must create an essence, my Brothers and Sisters, with which we can give humanity the ability to free itself from the actual illusion in which it still exists today. We are all exceptional, and once we have freed humanity from the infection and parasitism that afflicts it, we will receive praise.

To do this, however, we must never give up, because the fate of humanity is in our hands and we must restore what has been destroyed by centuries of destructive methods.

Knowledge has power. In all power there is Knowledge, and in all Knowledge there is Power.

The Morality Of Life

Something is here, something exists, someone doesn't notice. One knows it exists, but one does not understand it. They believe that this something is what it presents itself to be. The biggest problem of humanity is that it is easily manipulated without our knowledge, and that is the stigma of humanity. There are very few individuals who consciously walk in illusion-reality. There are even fewer individuals who are aware of this distorted world. My writings symbolise the upliftment, help and development of people and many people understand this.

Some of my writings are difficult for people to understand, but I do not address them to the average person, but to those who have the mental development to really understand what I am saying and to be able to use it for their own benefit.

Life is to be understood and then lived. You cannot live life in ignorance, because then you are as far away as possible from progress and understanding, which creates irrational delusions in the mind, which seals your fate. The elevation and understanding of the Illusory Reality elevates man to a higher level where he can evolve for his own sake.

Life gives and takes away, rewards and deprives. This evil circle can be broken if the chaotic human mind breaks out of the confusion and deals only with the mirror of its own mind enclosed in its own body. For every question asked, for every unexplained assumption, the answer is there in the mind, one just has to learn to understand the signals it sends.

Through progress, progress and Truth, we can easily discover the fact that contains in its underlying content the meaning of Life. To help people, to help ourselves, and finally to overcome the false life and experience the Paradise we are waiting for.

To step out of our comfort zone and ascend with our souls into Divine Perfection, where all unanswered questions will gain meaning and virtue, and where we will give ourselves what was long ago taken from us. Those who fight on the side of Truth will get what they need from life.

Progress takes us forward on the Path, changes our moral level, and at the same time raises the lower planes of mentality into a formula vibrating at higher frequencies, which serves as a separator to the higher, more essential facts of life, and which, by analysing the underlying content, gives us what we need.

This is the Morality of Life.

People In The Illusion

Every single human soul you've ever met, right? Is it true that they pretend to be True at the suggestion of Truth directed towards you to create a surreal Truth out of a fictitious Truth? What do people do for you? What have they done to deserve that you call them your friends? By meritorious deeds, laudable ideals, unparalleled sentimentality, devastating decadence?

What makes a man a man? "In the beginning was the Word", which has been replaced by a destructive version of it, and under the influence of which mankind suffers spiritually and morally. The people we meet every day are nothing more than part of a disguise, because your mind, dear reader, vibrates at higher frequencies, so there is a moral chasm between you.

They are part of a disguise that life forces upon you, what you see as relevant, or the opposite. Look at the people around you. Look into their souls, what do you read in them? I say this without sentimentality, they suffer from ignorance coupled with decadence and then a nihilistic lifestyle.

Because those who are not adequately supported at certain points in their lives are left to fend for themselves, or learn to accept that there is no one to help them, and so they try to find a solution on their own. A long time ago, the Gods and Our Father created us on this planet, they gave mankind the Knowledge so that we could rise up and become like them.

In the past this phenomenon was quite obvious, but as time went on, the slander and slander reared its hypocritical head and fictions were used to stigmatize what was called Truth.

Beyond that point, humanity lost the moral value that would have allowed it to become superhuman and degenerated to the level it is now. The section entitled "People in The Illusion" merely teaches us that humanity has lost the virtue that would have enabled it to be empowered and is now following a way of life that we call ignorance.

It is not the people's fault, but Our fault if we do not help them to get out of this Illusion. For it is We who have received what was once present, but has been replaced by fictions, and it is our task to redisclose this Knowledge to humanity. We have been chosen for this task.

Nihilism Is a Weapon Of Christianity – The Importance Of Spirituality

I am aware that I have recently written a post with a somewhat "dark" tone, which may cause some concern. I would like to point out that this post was written in the midst of lethargy, I simply felt compelled to write it. I no longer know why I wrote it.

However, it can serve as a lesson - don't let the darkness take over you, because who knows what wrong you will do then. Ask for guidance, for help from our Gods, and they will give you what you need.

There will be tasks that we as individuals cannot cope with. So many times we have to take the opportunity to ask for help. You will not bother them because we are from them, so they want us all to be here, committed members, happy and safe. To do this we too need to take the steps with consistent meditations and mindfulness exercises.

We need to put our being back where it belongs. Concentrate on achieving Paradise and don't let emotions and circumstances like these drag you down. You are important, you are striving for a goal and you will achieve it. Do not give up on your dreams, do not let negative energies control you.

Remember one thing - Every time you feel lethargic or depressed, remember one thing - you are strong and you have something special. These feelings often come unbidden, but with the power within you, you can stop them and remove them forever. May the strength be with you.

Depression and lethargy. Self-deception and lying. These are things an SS should avoid far and wide, because an SS has more important things to deal with that are more important than these petty, meaningless and destructive emotions. Emotions can and must be controlled in order to live a healthy life.

Many of us feel bad. We must do all we can to make our lives and our present the way we need them to be. We can do this through consistent work, but we can also do it with less and less effort. We just need to use our minds.

As we develop and progress, things in our lives will make sense. We will see things, approach them from a different perspective and change our mentality in a constructive direction, which is a necessary and sufficiently prominent part of this Path. Before one gets here, one can be confused about many things.

We must strive to achieve the Divine. We are all capable of realizing and attaining this concept, we only have to will it and make ceaseless, unceasing progress.

What is the point of a religion that teaches its followers to be kind to those who do you wrong, pray for those who do you wrong. A religion that has lost its morals and wants us to feel pity. But behind the mask is something, a monster - this monster, christened 'the creature', bent on the degradation and destruction of humanity.

In today's world, few people use their brains. Within your mind lurks a wonderful tool that can give you power over other human beings, that can give you the ability to influence your environment, that can give you the ability to create all that you need.

Giving and selfishness. Rich and poor. Few people give to good causes. Most do it purely for the attention and popularity, and to earn double, triple, quadruple, quintuple the money they give. Give from the heart, not in a capitalist way.

Nihilistic people always have been and always will be. It is our task to eradicate the ignorance that disguises and manipulates the manipulable man, that ruthlessly exploits his good will - to turn him into an entity suffering from a lack of soul and ideas - a soulless ignorance.

People need understanding, care and concern.

Selfishness and egoism. Making decisions for ourselves that affect and can affect other people is selfishness. A leader must listen to the will of his people and act accordingly, not in a conceited way for his own self-interest. If a country has no democracy, that country is doomed to fail.

People must work together for the well-being of a country, not one man

The Christian Church has been enriched over the centuries by the ignorance and deception. Has there ever been a 'religion' that has prospered unbroken in times of poverty and prosperity? What was the 'religion' whose money doubled during these times?

Human morality. People who lack empathy or love will not be able to relate to other people - they will not understand each other, their relationship will become one-way. In other words, one person has love or empathy, while the other person has less or none.

To feel love for someone is a wonderful feeling. Yet many people fall into this trap and fall in love with someone who has had very little success. Love as an emotion is the cause of many emotional states - disappointment, break-ups, every successful journey into a hopeless sea of depression from which one must swim.

Life is like a sea. You are in the middle of it, you have to do everything and you have to do it all to get closer to an island. On which island you will find calm, peace and happiness. You spend a certain amount of time here, but then duty calls and you have to do everything to reach the next island.

Once again, you do everything you can to reach the shore. The next island holds for you the goals for which you have and will continue to strive relentlessly.

Once you reach this island, you rest and improve, gather strength and slowly begin your next journey.

This list goes on through many, many islands until you reach the shore. The shore, as the realm of the Divine, where you can become the individual you have striven to become. You take off your bad qualities and replace them with positive ones. From there you will be on the island, where your adventure will be easier.

On this journey, you will reach the paradise you've been waiting for.

The meaningless gibberish that leaves the mouth of a Christian man. It is clear that in his moral crisis he cannot utter meaningful sentences because he is incapable of it. A man is only worth anything if his life has meaning. To live life without purpose? What is such a life worth?

Grey everyday life that does not allow you to get ahead or stay where you are. Because day by day he gets worse and worse as an existing being, living a nihilistic lifestyle, what is the point of such a life? Whose existence is a struggle in the sense that he is fighting against the darkness of himself.

We have to accept our inner darkness, but not let it come to the surface. Every time we allow our repressed self to surface, even for a little while, the more drops we pour into the cup that is the basis of the nihilistic man, and that is destruction.

We must live life. The life we have been given and the life we have chosen. I tell people here repeatedly who need help to think about what they have achieved, what they came here with and where they are now, but you also have to talk to yourself - when you came into this body, you probably chose this body for yourself.

You saw the pros and cons of the body you're in and you need to find the essence of that. Once you find that, you can start looking for the next one, because there's more. Every person has at least one ability, and you have to discover these abilities in order to achieve something with them.

Think about it, you have a skill that very few people have - but what good is it if you can't use it? You have to start looking for the essence of yourself, because those who walk this Path are better at many things than others who don't. You have to use that for your own benefit, and then you will begin to understand why you are in this body.

You have to redeem your soul, contrary to the fictional and destructive teachings of Christianity, not wait for someone else to do it for you. It is your soul, you must develop and nurture it. The Knowledge to do this is given to you and you must use it.

What if all people waited for someone else to do things for them? The whole world would stop in 1 month. We must not let extremist people change our morals, we must bring about the change ourselves.

A man who is rotten to the core, a man who has lost his purpose, a man who cannot find his place in this world, a man whose mission is to survive the darkness of everyday life and seek the happiness that has not yet found him. It is useless to live in vast material wealth if one cannot find one's place.

Someone has a lot of money but is poor in spirit.

Someone with little money but rich in spirit - What is the difference?

The Battle Of The Ignorant and The Aware

The Spirit of Truth shines on the shore, a wind that signals to people that something is coming. It sets its foot in courtyards, gardens, villages, and knocks on doors, some of which open, some of which remain closed. Taken in this paradigm, the human ignorant mind, the sinful soul, in its illusory reality, is part of the human chaotic civilization in which it must exist.

The nihilist is left cold, human morality turns into a severe decadence, and the next stage of ignorance occurs. It is the river that can move on, move forward, and look ahead to the future that awaits it. Ignorance fights a fierce battle in the illusion of submission to the moral fact that seeks to analyse and reflect the reality that without Truth and Wisdom the human mind is doomed to fail and wanders all day in a dead end, and in its destructive reality chain-reacts with the individuals it captures and plays with them like a spinning wheel.

Morning, noon, evening - in their common triad is a monotony that seeks to reflect the human need to exist for some reason. The morning is the first stage of the unconscious, the beginning, the noon in which it plans and prepares for the next stage of the unconscious, the evening.

Every day of the unconscious mind is a day of nothingness in its own illusory reality from which it cannot find a way out.

It bears no affinity with the nature and phenomena of the Conscious Man, for his mind is capable of receiving True Facts and, in the absence of impressions, is able to form a realistic outlook and agenda which will be the benefit and cornerstone of his development. "For what is True?" one would ask from the unconscious. The answer would be that what surrounds us every day is the True.

The Conscious Mind would give a different answer to this question because it has a power that many do not have. Why is what surrounds us true? Is it because we don't want to accept the explanation behind it, or is it because we are absolutely certain that what surrounds us is True?

In an Illusion every single phenomenon, even the smallest moment, seems real because that is its essence. We need to break out of this evil cycle that has become part of our lives, and realize that we need to reflect on our ability to perceive the actual Truth and to distinguish between illusion and reality?

We must walk with our eyes open, not as an ignorant person. One must interpret phenomena if one does not want to remain ignorant. One should deal with one's life if one does not want to be an ignorant nihilist. Let the ignorant learn, lest he suffer moral decay. Let the ignorant live so that his death will not be in vain.

Let the Conscious One, given the opportunity, evolve. Do not waste days, weeks, because they are at the expense of your own development. As the tendency on the scales of progress tips low, so does one's mental and moral level tip in the destructive direction.

You are in a boat. Do you want this boat to sail on rivers, including progress and understanding, or do you want it to be over a lake and not move forward?

Which one do you want?

The Awareness Of Vision Can Be Put In Parallel With The Reality Of Life

Suggestions, monologues, actions, experiences, Wisdom. Their parallels are linked like a chain reaction, yet they are missing something. The Something that gives life to the dead, the Something that turns ugliness into beauty, the Something that enlightens the mind, the Something that fills the soul with light.

Everyone in this "life" has something that gives rise to the above concepts.

Do our fellow human beings exist in an illosophical reality? Yet, so much resembles reality. Can illusion become reality? It already is. In life, within which we can talk about illusion, deception, disguise - their essence is common - all have a destructive effect on humanity.

People lie, deceive, manipulate and deceive. If you have more ice cream than the other guy, you are overwhelmed with hate. If you have less ice cream than the other person, they are overwhelmed with arrogance and a "look down" mentality. People are digging their own grave in the moral plexiglass, a grave that can hold more than one person, because every drop collects in that glass, and that glass is synonymous with the grave.

Why is there so much evil in this world? What is the reason why one man hates another? When do we realize that we write and hurt each other, and there is very little tendency for that to persist.

Ice breaks the living, fire withers the dead, knowledge lifts the soul.

Loneliness in man, the opposite of the meaning of life from which so many suffer - a social problem. The lonely person needs attention and care, doesn't want to be ignored, doesn't want anything he does to be worthless. I could go on and on with examples in this situation.

In life we are often disappointed and happy. We do not decide what society should be like, but we decide what the people around us should be like. People need support and help, joy and happiness, but some people don't have it through their own fault or the fault of others.

Depression is just a starting point. It just goes on from there, with bigger and riskier problems. While you live every moment of misery that comes from loneliness, you could be enjoying the fucking life instead - be happy. Life is about seeking your happiness and loving people so that they love you in return.

If those things are missing, depression will only get worse. Beyond that level, you get to a severe state where you not only feel lonely and unwell, but also hopeless. Hopelessness about life, society, people. Then comes the next phase.

You are still suffering from these. No one helps you, no one supports you, you feel so empty. You don't know what to do, you see the days as useless, they come and come, full of loneliness. You don't know your place in the world, you don't know what you should do to feel better.

Depression is the worst symptom of what's waiting for you. The fear of loneliness has now become a friendship, a life of hopelessness that contains so many lies.

The world is a rotten place, but it's so rotten it can't be fully described. Simply the human relationships that affect our lives, the prolonged causal suffering, what is such a life worth? The darkness that envelops and consumes us in such a situation is simply the lack of appreciation.

Life is a game. You either win or you lose. Everybody has a fucking reason to decide why they want to make the choices they make, why they want to throw their life away, why they don't want to live this shit anymore. It's not cowardice, it's projecting sheer hopelessness onto things, where the spark of life goes out, destruction begins.

A devastation that affects the living, the dead, and simply eats away. A life deprived of many good things is followed by failure and disappointment, every day. The happiness that is not given? Or is it given, but one cannot thrive in

What is life worth? You are born, you grow old, you grow up, you die. It's the fucking bumpy road of life, and no living thing is exempt from it.

Man only yearns and yearns for things he knows will never come, will never come. The instincts of human life, coupled with such bullshit, what is life worth? Time, of which there is so much, yet seems so little, is wasted on pathetic things. What is life worth?

Be happy, be healthy, these are the necessities of life. Those who find happiness in nothing, who live only for today, see their future and their present as hopeless. He doesn't look back to his past because the memories of the past consume him. And it affects every single day, it's there with you, holding your fucking hand, not letting you be happy. What's life worth?

It's easy to think about suicide, but harder to do it. When you first think about suicide, it's worth thinking about it later, because if you don't deal with it, it will eat you up. People tend to agonise over things they can't help but suffer from. What is life worth?

What does the depravity of today's society bring for the future? For those who suffer a moral crisis? For the unhappy? For those who suffer? What is life worth?

Human relationships are fraught with countless disappointments and negatives, idiocy and pity, moral problems from which man suffers so much. And his suffering finds no ears - the first stage, loneliness, begins. From here man begins to decide the meaning of his life, to ask questions about his existence, to seek answers to those questions.

Solitude is the only friend. A life paved with ambiguity and self-delusion, believing you are a superhero, that you are worth something, that you matter, that someone needs you, that someone loves you. Self-delusion is self-deception, and the realisation that you are good at nothing only makes you more lonely. What is life worth?

The next stage is the fucked up symptoms of depression, that seals your life - decline. This is the point where you will turn to drugs. Even drugs cannot make this moral problem, which we now call "society", any more beautiful.

What life is worth?

What is the fucking meaning of life? You ask yourself question after question, without answers, and you continue to suffer. By now they've all become your companions, companions of hopelessness and loneliness, of depression and self-deception. Later, questions about suicidal relationships begin to come to mind.

Which sooner or later you do, because you have no one to love, no one to respect, no one to acknowledge, no one to praise for your work, and they culminate in a void inside you. Once you ask yourself these questions, you start to see life as lousy, you trust no one, and you refuse to love anyone, and you fear disappointment, again.

These are part of suicide. You could say they lead to a place of no return, you do it, you do it. Before you do it, you would call the people you think love and trust you. But the phone call doesn't reach them, it falls on deaf ears - They hear what you say, but they don't care. Before you commit suicide, you ask yourself one last, all-important question: What is life worth?

And a voice speaks to you, giving you clarity. A voice that fills your ears with joy and happiness. A voice that tells you that you are valuable and important. Don't throw away the life you've been given: 'Wake up, I'm here to help you', says the voice. You will wake up and start to feel better. You will realise how much corruption there is in this world and you will decide - you will make your world a better place.

You will start your Spiritual Adventure and everything will be better. You will feel better, you will feel safe, and by the way - you will be happy. You feel that someone needs you, and that someone is not on Earth. He lives higher than that. And that Someone makes your life better, gives you hope when you need it. He gives you happiness when you're sad.

And through Him you find Essence in life.

The Paradigm Of Scepticism In A Chaotic Humanity

Man has accepted that which surrounds and consumes him - Life. Scepticism is monumentally present in life, both in individuals and in groups. It is part of their lowly, ignorant lives, and in so doing they deprive themselves of the virtue we call Knowledge. For what is man without Life?

He loses the essence of death if he has not lived life before.

Evolution has changed significantly. Society has followed, but unfortunately in the wrong direction. The total destruction that occurred affected the human soul the most. For the Power that was created for us was destroyed.

The emptiness that raged in man, the decay, the destruction of the very essence of life - all were deliberate acts. Because the power created for us has been destroyed. With this Knowledge we had the power to make the ugly beautiful. This place was a paradise in bloom, where everything was a given. A realm of deception and lies that substituted good for itself.

The good that brought abundance, understanding and happiness to people. The seat of understanding and acceptance - the joy that contains the spark of life, and that is Knowledge.

In the old days, when people were happy, loved and cared for each other, it was Paradise. It had to be destroyed, Truth and Reality had to be erased and replaced by fictions. Which replaced Paradise and created the sour, rotten reality we now live in. Creating a morally deficient, spiritually lowly inclined and yet ignorant creature.

Man has completely lost his faculties, the faculties that gave him joy and happiness, and now he wanders in obscurity, an obscurity that must be erased. In the possession of so much Knowledge, man was able to evolve and progress, but it is now obsolete, man is not evolving spiritually. The most important fact is that man has lost it, and we are still drinking the juice of its effects.

The distorted reality has arrived, which includes the only concept that has a great impact on man - destruction. Where Truth has been lost and replaced by lies, to the detriment of the people, there the decay begins. Man has forgotten the instinctive Truth, his mind is closed, those fortunate (us) who have the means to restore and reclaim this realm of Knowledge must evolve again.

We must achieve our destiny on this Earth that was meant for us. Man must trust in his true self and abilities, in what lies within him but has been forgotten. He must live with it and develop this blessing to regain his old nature and rise again.

Think about it, why did many people not like it when someone lived with this Power afterwards? Because it was a threat. They couldn't imagine someone regaining their original being, with all the Knowledge and Wisdom that it contained. Instead, they would have preferred simply stupid people who had no Power.

Not at all conspicuous? Excuse me - if instead you would rather question our previous abilities. I'm sorry that your endless egoism and morality got the better of you. Let me give you another example. With the horror movies that are being broadcast in the media today, why do you think that every movie has a certain "good" and a certain "bad"?

Coincidentally, the good is always the "Christian" fictional monster who manipulates the ignorant mind to love him. The one who despises humanity, who preys on their souls, and you worship him? Evil is always exchanged for good, and vice versa. Isn't it striking that all horror films with this theme are put together like this?

And those that depict Truth are forgotten? Why do you think those who used their power were not loved? You can't explain this with arguments, you have to figure it out for yourself.

The mind can store a lot of pain, love and selfless adoration. Simply the way the mind works is worth another description, but I don't want to go into that now - that's another question. The human mind tends to accommodate manipulation, love of others, lies, happiness. But how they settle in the depths of the mind depends on the individual.

That one should be open to emotions from outside is nonsense. Well, that is also an individual thing. In today's world there is a significant prevalence of "beings" who try to influence people through manipulation, lies and deception. This was not the case in the old days, because of progress. Such people know exactly what to say and when to say it, so that the phrase is imprinted in the other person's mind.

From there, once they have been persuaded, it is not so difficult. It's up to the individual with the right mind. An open mind is an open window to deception and lies. Such a mind is dangerous because it can also receive negative messages. A closed mind that you can control and manage will be of great benefit to you. You don't have to fear lies because you will be able to see through them.

That's why you have to work with your mind and restore your original self. Where you are bubbling with joy, pleasure and last but not least, Knowledge. You will not be affected by the stinking malice of people. In today's world there are fewer and fewer individuals who think.

Most importantly - You must evolve spiritually to see the beautiful side of Life and be happy!

The Age Of Satan – Use Knowledge Wisely

Over the centuries, man's Spiritual, mental and moral level has been degraded and carried away by decadent tendencies to such an extent that people have completely forgotten the importance of the value of Spirituality because of systematic Christian oppression. But that has passed.

Over time, more and more of the "hidden", "forbidden" Knowledge that our Gods have bequeathed to us and to human civilisation has come to light.

The enemy wanted to keep this Knowledge, they did not want it to fall into the hands of humanity. The problem with this is that the Knowledge is available, but the number of people who still ignore it because they are more interested in their own nihilistic way of life is monumental.

With this Knowledge we can break out of the evil cycle we call ignorance. Because every single destructive thing on Earth comes from ignorance. The average mind cannot do anything about this paradigm because it does not have the absolute starting point to end it.

The higher dimensions are closed off to humanity. Humans have been deprived of the virtue in which they once had a rich share, but now Truth has been replaced by false Knowledge, with which countless disasters are caused by those who do not even know what these practices do.

We who are here are aware of the "higher" dimensions, and many of our fellow human beings have experienced this. These are the Dimensions that have been hidden from us "mortals" and for this the Christian church can be held responsible. We must end this ignorant age and continue the age of Satan.

Many do not understand what this means. In this Age, ignorance, moral decadence, nihilism will lose its virtue, the enemy will be fully exposed even in ignorance, and a New Glorious Age will finally begin, which will drastically change the trend of life on earth in a Positive direction.

That is why we are here to help Satan bring about this Age.

Every Project that Members get involved in is beneficial. The Gods have great respect for this kind of mentality. Such works bring us closer to the Golden Age for which we have been waiting and striving for so long. Where life is to be lived without enemies, where there is happiness and serenity. This is what we bring.

When we evolve spiritually, we raise our Souls to a goal to which not all people are born. We are here for a reason, and we work to bring this goal because we are fit for this task, and our Father has entrusted us with this goal. Let us respect that.

The mental/melancholic states we often feel, such as depression or laziness, are all concepts that hinder us from achieving this goal and always try to rob us of the virtue and moral happiness we seek. A positive mentality is one of the pillars of the Happy Life.

Because our souls have been systematically cursed over the centuries, this has resulted in mental blocks that can lurk in our subconscious and, without proper and sufficient care, remain there, and can be the destructive cause of unpleasant mental states and emotions that occur unexpectedly and unpleasantly later on.

We need to cleanse ourselves spiritually so that we can begin a new life with our Father.

There are countless positive aspects to this cleansing. One begins a whole New Life on the side of Knowledge and completely changes one's mentality to Knowledge, which fills one with light.

One's single life can be divided into two stages - ignorant and conscious. He can spend one half of his life in ignorance, both because of the environment, the "beliefs" of those around him, and the repository of false delusions induced by social media and social media brainwashing. These are firmly embedded in the human mind.

Hence the beginnings of SS who are "terrified" or have irrational fears. It must be understood that these are nothing more than brainwashing by the enemy to keep us away from Spirituality and deprive us of the virtue of sharing in happiness and Spiritual wealth.

Since the enemy dominates much of the media, social media and countless other destructive phenomena used by millions of people, information can be so drastically falsified that disinformation then escalates and this kind of misinformation and "Knowledge" becomes ingrained in the minds of humanity.

These can be eliminated by human thinking. Unfortunately, in today's society, I increasingly find that people are not worthy of the concept of what we call thinking. The concept is there in one's mind, yet one does not use it enough, or uses it incorrectly.

Almost everyone is locked into the online reality, and then many wonder why young people are so lazy and unmotivated. Young people are more influenced by stimuli on social networking sites than older people. Events such as bullying and deception have a very strong impact on young people.

We are talking about a developing organisation and mind, but the enemy knows this perfectly well. The minds of young people are easily deceived by almost anything.

Given the low paradigms on which human morality vibrates, we must approach it with a sentimental mentality. Any ignoramus who truly belongs to us, but has not yet come to the Truth on his own, needs help. Of course, there are those who are beyond help in this respect, but I am not talking about them now.

Such companions can be led to the Truth, safely of course.

I used to read a sermon by our Wonderful High Priestess (if I remember correctly, she wrote it), which she wrote to spread the Truth, in a personal way. It involves, for example, taking a small slip of paper with a small amount of Truth in it and hiding it in books, for example, or in a place where many people go.

People who belong to us in Spirit tend to notice the Truth. Because there is Real, True Knowledge lurking in the souls of the people among us, on some level, it just needs to be brought to the surface. Knowledge cannot be completely changed by Christianity, because it lies in the human mind.

It can only replace it with fictions, but it cannot erase the Truth forever.

With reference to the above, I would like to dwell a little on the subject of autonomy. Self-reliance must be in man, in a healthy way of course. Excessive self-confidence can be the cause of countless failures, and one must be aware of this. Ego "boosting" and feeling superior to the ignorant is normal, but of course only in a healthy way.

We cannot start curse every person we meet. For this kind of work, there are specific, concrete occasions when we unleash our anger.

Knowledge is given to us by Satan and the Gods to better our own lives and to build our Future, not to act out our desires for superiority. This does not mean, of course, that we cannot use Black Magic, the Curses, but as I said above, there are special occasions for this.

Monumental Knowledge can easily change a person, make them feel superior, which at a certain point can be unhealthy for their State of Mind. If one is desperate to practice Black Magic and have fun with it, but does not know how to handle such energy, one can easily fail.

Everything must be left to its own time. A healthy self-confidence, ego and self-assurance beyond the knowledge of Truth and Knowledge must be allowed. We must know how to handle these stimuli, as this is information that very few people have, and we must be careful. Knowledge can easily turn a person out of his healthy mentality, so use it with caution.

It is the perception and understanding that this Knowledge is not possessed by almost all humanity, so to speak, that makes us special. But it comes at a price. Satan has given us this Knowledge to apply it to ourselves and the world in a positive way through RTRs.

We need to focus now on making our own world a better place, and then continue to do so for the whole planet. The ability is there and we need to use it collectively and eventually We will be the ones to bring the Light to this dark Earth and bring happiness.

The past is there for man to learn from his mistakes. The present is for man to improve himself and create what we call the future.

Hail Satan!

Final Thoughts and Conclusion

The motivation for writing this work is the centuries-old parasitism that has escalated into a monumental cloud of ignorance, in which the life of the pseudo-self is no more than an illusion and the phenomena around it are merely a physical experience, without any idea of the value behind them.

Man is a gullible creature. There is no man who does not believe in something. For as the higher mind casts a shadow on the shore, so ignorance casts itself into the twilight. Choose your men carefully - You have broken out of Illusion, but in the monumental tendency of humanity many are still in it.

The SS, in kinship with the Truth, will fight for eternity. We will not stop for mere petty obsessions or delusions. We fight, and with our sword we draw a line in this cloud of illusion, and our sword represents Life itself.

It is with our minds that we will end this age and together, with our collective strength, bring about the Age Of Our Father, in which ignorance, manipulation and deception will cease.

Many may not see the point of this, but in time it will become clear to all, even those we fight for whose souls vibrate at a low frequency.

Our empathy, perseverance and team spirit, our daily battles for Truth and Welfare take us higher as SS. The bickering that sometimes goes on between SS adds to this concept, as the bickering and monologues between SS are meaningful and take us further towards certain parts of understanding.

The Higher Powers Who Protect and Defend Us are systematically Helping Us, both individually and as a family. They Are the ones we should be grateful to have and the ones we should wake up to in the morning to start our day.

We have broken out of that illusion. If anyone has not fully understood the book, read it again and again to better understand the current paradigm. There are many statements and phrases in this work that should not be interpreted word for word, but ponder the underlying meaning and get the answer. But ignorance, even if we fight it, is something we must guard against. Many people's minds are not mature enough to recognise and grasp what we are fighting for.

In time this will change and they will see that, but in the meantime we must continue our personal development, our collective action.

Choose well the people around you. These people may leave you after a while, but they will never leave your mind.

"Without Knowledge, Power is Lost, as Power is Lost, so is Understanding Lost and so is True Knowledge Lost."
